

TECHNICAL ADVISOR

- Unique opportunity to help the vehicle modification industry and enthusiast sector.
- Porirua-based.

The Low Volume Vehicle Technical Association (LVVTA) is an independent organisation focussed on providing an achievable and practically-oriented regulatory environment in which to enable New Zealanders to safely modify and build motor vehicles.

The Technical Advisor role presents a great opportunity for you to make perfect use of all of that knowledge, expertise, and practical experience that you've built up while working in the motor vehicle industry – and now apply it to the vehicle modification industry and hobby, in a complex and varied – but always interesting – comfortable office-based environment.

The role involves being part of a mechanical and engineering-based automotive team which is responsible for providing guidance and technical support to the vehicle modification and construction industry, while constantly improving and maintaining the relevance of the technical information that the low volume certification system is based on.

The right fit for the role will be someone with a solid automotive background and a keen interest in cars, and ideally a real passion for modified and individually-constructed vehicles. It could be a perfect role for a motor mechanic who's had enough of cold workshops and a sore back and knees!

A big part of the technical support role involves answering technically-challenging questions via email and telephone, so the ideal person will be detail-oriented, confident, have sound judgement, have well-developed written and verbal communication skills, and be comfortable understanding and applying regulations.

You'll be amongst a strong and supportive team environment, where there are big responsibilities and a lot of pressure, but it's a great team to work with, and for the right person it will be a very satisfying job knowing that you're playing a role in keeping Kiwi ingenuity alive and well.
